On Tuesday evening Oct. 25, at the residence of Mrs. Mary R. Booker, was given a reception by Miss Lucie Barbour, in honor of Mrs. L. Cook and Mr. John Minkins of Norfolk.

Among the many present were: Mr. and Mrs. Whitfield McKinlay, Miss Cora Thomas, Miss Ollie Booker, Mrs. Emily Clark, Mrs. Mayers, Mr. Francis Upshaw, Mr. Wyatt Archer, Mr. Geo. Packer, Delametta, Mr. Thomas H. Clark, Mr. A. G. Booker, and many others. Music and eucbre played their parts in the entertainment of the guests, at 10:30 o'clock the guests entered the dining room, where supper was served. The table was elegantly and sumptuously prepared. After supper Mrs. Cook and Mr. Minkins; were congratulated on their happy reunion of hearts long separated, thence this was an affair long to be remembered.

On last Sunday morning the angel of death visited the home of Mr. M. C. Maxfield, corner 1st and N streets and laid claim to his fairest flower Lena. She attended the public schools previous to her illness and was about to enter the High school. In every room from the first grade to the eight she was second to none.

She was buried on Tuesday from the Franklin St. church at 2 o'clock. The casket was laden with beautiful floral tributes from her friends.

Bertha Seaton, the only daughter of Mr. George L. Seaton, died last Monday at the residence of her uncle, Mr. John A. Seaton, in New York. The body was brought home for interment. The funeral was largely attended on Wednesday from her mothers residence.

"SOUTHERN MOB RULE," The Simple Story of an Eloquent Woman.

Subject:—"SOUTHERN MOB RULE."

T. THOMAS FORTUNE

Will introduce the Lecturer.

Miss Wells made a National Reputation as Editor of the Memphis Free Speech, the publication of which she was compelled to suspend because of her Bold, Fearless and Intelligent Denunciation of Mob Violence and the enactment and enforcement of malicious and degrading class law.

As a platform orator Miss Wells takes high and commanding rank as an earnest and eloquent speaker. No woman of the Race has greater power than she possesses to hold the attention of an audience. In a public address before the Afro-American League at Knoxville, in July, 1891, she astonished her hearers by her impassioned denunciation of the Separate Bar Law and Mob Rule. In her lecture on "The Afro-American in Literature," delivered before the Concord Literary Circle of Brooklyn, New York September 15, 1892, she completely captivated the large and cultivated audience; and at the Testimonial tendered her by the women of New York City and Brooklyn, at Lyric Hall, New York, October 5, 1892, she moved the vast assemblage to tears by the pathetic recital of the terrible lynching of three of her friends at Memphis, in March, 1892, and the forced suspension of her newspaper.
